Andrew Exum is a Washington, D.C.-based partner of Hakluyt & Company, a management consultancy. From 2015 to 2017, Andrew served as the deputy assistant secretary of defense for Middle East Policy. He was the principal advisor to the Secretary of Defense and Under Secretary of Defense for Policy on international security strategy and policy for the Middle East, and for oversight of security cooperation programs, including foreign military sales, in the region. Andrew joined the Department of Defense from the Boston Consulting Group, another global management consulting firm, where he advised clients from a wide range of industries on business strategy. Andrew previously served in the Department of Defense on an International Affairs Fellowship from the Council on Foreign Relations. A native of East Tennessee, Andrew was the recipient of an ROTC scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania, where he majored in Classical Studies and English Literature. Andrew served four years on active duty in the U.S. Army. He led a platoon of light infantry in Afghanistan and was decorated for valor during Operation Anaconda in 2002. He later led Army Rangers as part of special operations task forces in both Afghanistan and Iraq. Upon leaving the Army, Andrew received a master's degree in Middle Eastern Studies from the American University of Beirut and a Ph.D. in War Studies from King's College London.

The Middle East After America

Dr. Andrew Exum

Both domestically and abroad, there is a growing sense the United States is moving on from its decades-long commitments to the Middle East. But is that really true? And if so, to what degree? What options do U.S. policy-makers face, and how are regional partners and adversaries responding?

The Diplomacy Institute's Diplomatic Lecture Series presents a lively conversation with special guest, Dr. Andrew Exum, an American scholar of the Middle East and a former U.S. Army officer, to discuss the most pressing contemporary diplomatic issues.

After the lecture, a reception for students, faculty, and invited guests will occur from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Garden Room (Bayou Building, Room 1510).
